

I had two very serious complicated surgeries with Dr. Cachia. I had a genetic condition that affected both ankles. As a nurse I got about seven opinions, one physician told me he would not do the surgery as there was so much damage to the tendons, he recommended I wear huge corrective shoes for the rest of my life. When I finally went to Dr. Cachia he did not want to rush me into surgery, he did testing tried some other measures, and finally I realized surgery was going to be the only answer. I had been a runner and could no longer do that, because I could no longer exercise, my weight ballooned, and between the lack of activity and bone pain I was really depressed. I was also really afraid of losing a leg. I really got to know Dr. Cachia during my surgery and recovery, he was very confident and at the same time very caring. I did have to be compliant after the surgery and adhere to bed rest. It was a long process but worth the result. I prolonged doing my second leg and finally scheduled it. The second recovery was also difficult, but worth the result. I have talked to other patients who have had my condition and they have needed several surgeries. He was there for me every step of the way. I regret I did not do the surgery sooner, as he had recommended. Bottom line I cannot believe the result!!!! I never thought I would use the treadmill again but I do on a regular basis.

You can tell that for Dr. Cachia medicine is more than a job it's a calling, he really helps people. I have seen him display confidences but never a bit of ego. I know several physicians personally and professionally and have only heard stellar comments about his reputation. He is not a magician so his advice for recovery needs to be followed. To sum up my experience, Dr. Cachia is highly skilled, and he is highly respected in his field. In a world of such cynicism he really cares! The person who referred me to him told me this guy's different, he is the real deal! Truer words have never been spoken. If you have any doubts about his skill ask the office for my phone number I have quite a story and it's a story of hope and healing!!!!
